

The Exhaustee Situation in Ohio

October 29, 2002

In Ohio, unemployed workers may first qualify for up to 26 weeks of regular state unemployment benefits. Over the past three months, roughly 35,000 workers have exhausted these benefits without finding a job. The number of “exhaustees” in Ohio has risen 176 percent over the past two years, from nearly 13,000 to 35,000 over similar three-month periods. This is an indication that long-term unemployment in the state has grown significantly.

Since the enactment of temporary federal legislation in March 2002, unemployed workers who exhaust their regular state benefits have been able to qualify for federally funded benefits, which in Ohio can last for up to 13 weeks. New data for September that was just released by the Labor Department, along with data from earlier months, indicate that this temporary federal program (called the Temporary Emergency Unemployment Compensation or “TEUC” program) is proving particularly inadequate in Ohio. Large numbers of workers are running out of federal benefits before they find new employment. In Ohio:

- Almost 8,000 unemployed workers had their TEUC benefits run out in September before they were able to find a new job.
- Since the TEUC program began, some 52,000 unemployed workers have exhausted their TEUC benefits. The state ranks tenth highest in the nation by this measure.

The large number of exhaustees in Ohio reflects in part the fact that the TEUC program is weaker than similar temporary federal programs enacted in previous recessions. It provides substantially fewer weeks of assistance, for example, than the temporary federal program enacted in response to the recession of the early 1990s.

Over the past month Congress has begun to consider whether to provide additional weeks of federal unemployment benefits to those who have exhausted their TEUC benefits and remain without work, whether to provide more weeks of benefits to the unemployed in high unemployment states, and whether to extend the current TEUC program beyond its current expiration date at the end of the year. In the meantime, the lack of Congressional action to date means that those who have exhausted their benefits and remain without work have neither unemployment benefits nor a paycheck upon which to rely.
