Note: In New England, some towns located in counties not listed here may face large FMR declines, and some towns in counties on this list may not face declines. This is the case because, previous to the new OMB metropolitan area definitions, New England was the only geographic region in the nation where metropolitan area borders did not correspond with county borders. This meant that counties could contain parts of multiple metropolitan areas, as well as non-metropolitan areas, and renders 2004-2005 county-level comparisons in New England useless. In order to better match 2004 FMR data with 2005 FMR data, this table uses proxy 2004 FMR values for the New England counties highlighted in yellow. These values were created by taking the averages for all townships within a county, weighted by the number of renter households as reported in the 2000 U.S. Census. These values are for comparative purposes only. For local impact at the township level, please see 2004 FMRs and compare those numbers to the county-level values in the 2005 numbers.
