Over 2.1 million uninsured adults with low incomes are in the Medicaid coverage gap – too poor to qualify for Affordable Care Act (ACA) marketplace assistance because they have incomes below the poverty line, yet ineligible for Medicaid because their state hasn’t enacted the ACA Medicaid expansion. In Tennessee, some 119,000 uninsured adults in the coverage gap would become eligible if the state expanded Medicaid.

Expansion would provide coverage to Tennesseans who are now shut out of coverage. To qualify for Medicaid in Tennessee, parents must earn less than 88% of the federal poverty line (or less than $20,266 for a family of three annually). Adults without dependent children are not eligible for Medicaid at all.

How Would Closing the Coverage Gap Help Tennesseans?

Improving access to care and health outcomes
- Expanding coverage increases the use of preventive care and reduces the utilization of emergency care.
- The state’s decision not to expand Medicaid cost the lives of 964 Tennesseans aged 55-64 from 2014 to 2017 alone.

Reducing racial and ethnic disparities
- People of color make up 60% of the coverage gap population nationwide, and 28% in Tennessee.
- Closing the coverage gap is one of the most effective ways to reduce disparities in coverage and health outcomes.

Covering more children
- As newly eligible parents seek coverage, many will also enroll their children.
- Over 120,000 children would gain coverage if all remaining non-expansion states expand Medicaid in 2023.

Improving financial security
- People with coverage are less likely to face catastrophic medical costs, leave bills unpaid, or borrow money to pay for medical care.
- Medical debt decreased by 44 percent between 2013 and 2020 in states that expanded Medicaid in 2014, compared to a 10 percent decrease in non-expansion states.

Reducing uncompensated care costs and creating state savings
- Research shows that state costs of expanding coverage are largely or fully offset by savings in uncompensated care and other areas.
- The American Rescue Plan offers an additional $1.1 billion to Tennessee should it expand Medicaid.
