Kentucky Exempts Working-Poor Families from Income Taxes, But the Tax on Near-Poor Families Is Among Nation's Highest

Kentucky's 2006 income tax threshold

Rank among the 42 states with income taxes

(The income level at which families begin paying income tax)

(1 = lowest threshold)

- For single-parent families of three: $16,600 16
- For two-parent families of four: $19,900 18

Kentucky's 2006 income tax levied on working-poor and near-poor families

Rank (1 = highest tax)

- For families of three with incomes at the poverty line ($16,079): $0 (tied for) 16
- For families of four with incomes at the poverty line ($20,615): $82 17
- For families of three with minimum-wage earnings ($10,712): $0 (tied for) 7
- For families of three with incomes at 125% of poverty line ($20,099): $485 5
- For families of four with incomes at 125% of poverty line ($25,769): $891 1

Kentucky's low-income credit more than tripled its thresholds in 2005, but near-poor working families still face high income taxes.

- Kentucky's low-income credit increases its threshold for families of four to $19,900, which is just below the poverty line for a family of that size. The credit also reduces the tax liability for a family of four at the poverty line to $82.
- Because the new credit quickly phases out just above the poverty line, Kentucky families of four earning 125 percent of the poverty line still face the highest tax in the nation, at $891.
