Federal Rental Assistance Hasn't Kept Pace

Despite the importance of rental assistance, more federal dollars go to homeownership subsidies like the mortgage interest deduction, which mainly benefit higher-income households, instead of families that struggle the most to afford housing. Michigan communities only thrive when everyone — renters and homeowners, whether Black, brown, or white — have access to decent, affordable housing.

578,400 low-income Michigan renters pay more than half their income for housing. Most don't receive rental assistance due to funding limitations. Who are they?

When low-income renters can't find a decent, affordable apartment, they are more likely to be evicted and risk becoming homeless.

On a single night in 2020, 8,640 people experienced homelessness in Michigan. An estimated 34,850 Michigan school children lived in shelters, on the street, doubled up with other families, or in hotels or motels during the 2018-2019 school year.

Our country's current policy approach gives more help to those who need it least. We can change this. Policymakers need to work together to expand rental assistance and ensure that all Michigan residents have access to good, affordable homes.
