Fact Sheet: Federal Rental Assistance

Federal rental assistance helps struggling District of Columbia seniors, people with disabilities, veterans, and working families keep a roof over their heads and make ends meet. Over 31,000 low-income households in the District of Columbia use federal rental assistance to rent modest housing at an affordable cost; at least 79 percent have extremely low incomes.*

Who Does Federal Rental Assistance Help?

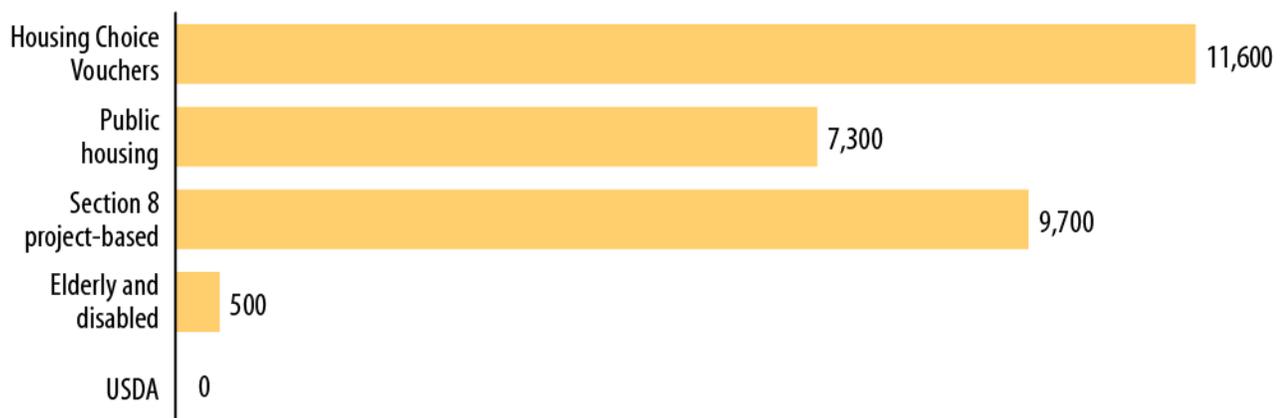

83 Percent of Households Using Federal Rental Assistance in the District of Columbia Include Children or People Who Are Elderly or Disabled

- Rental assistance supports low-wage working families: in 2016, 72 percent of non-elderly, non-disabled households receiving HUD rental assistance in District of Columbia were working, worked recently, or likely were subject to work requirements.
- These programs brought $409,000,000 in federal funding into the District of Columbia in 2016.

What Major Types of Federal Rental Assistance Do District of Columbia Families Use?

Number of households assisted

* Low-income households have incomes that do not exceed 80 percent of the local median income, which is equivalent to $53,400 for a family of three in the District of Columbia. Extremely low-income households have incomes that do not exceed 30 percent of the local median income, which is equivalent to $20,050 for a family of three in the District of Columbia.

Most District of Columbia Renters in Need Receive No Assistance

39,000 low-income households pay more than half their income for rent, 16 percent more than in 2007.

Who are these households?

29% have children

36% are elderly or disabled

58% are working

55% live in poverty

Federal Rental Assistance Programs Have Not Kept Pace with Growing Need

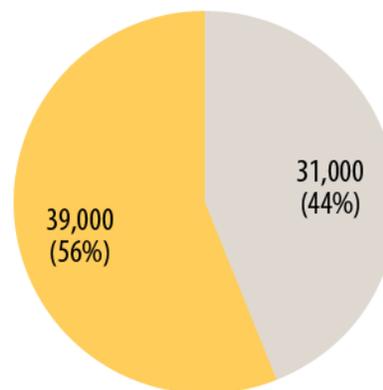

For every assisted household in the District of Columbia, even more low-income households are homeless or pay more than half their income for rent and do not receive any federal rental assistance due to limited funding.

When housing costs consume more than half of household income, low-income families are at greater risk of becoming homeless.

- The single-night census in 2016 found that 8,350 people in the District of Columbia were homeless or living in shelters, including 350 veterans and 4,667 people in families with children.
- Another 3,580 school-age children lived in unstable housing, such as doubled up with other families, during the 2014-2015 school year.
