

SNAP Helps 1 in 9 Workers in Idaho Put Food on the Table

SNAP, the Food Stamp Program in Idaho, plays a crucial role in helping workers in low-paying jobs afford a basic diet in Idaho. Roughly 77,600 Idahoan workers live in households that participated in the Food Stamp Program in the last year, Census data show.

Millions of Americans work in jobs with low wages, inconsistent schedules, and no benefits such as paid sick leave — all of which contribute to high turnover and spells of unemployment. Many of these workers get help putting food on the table through the Food Stamp Program.

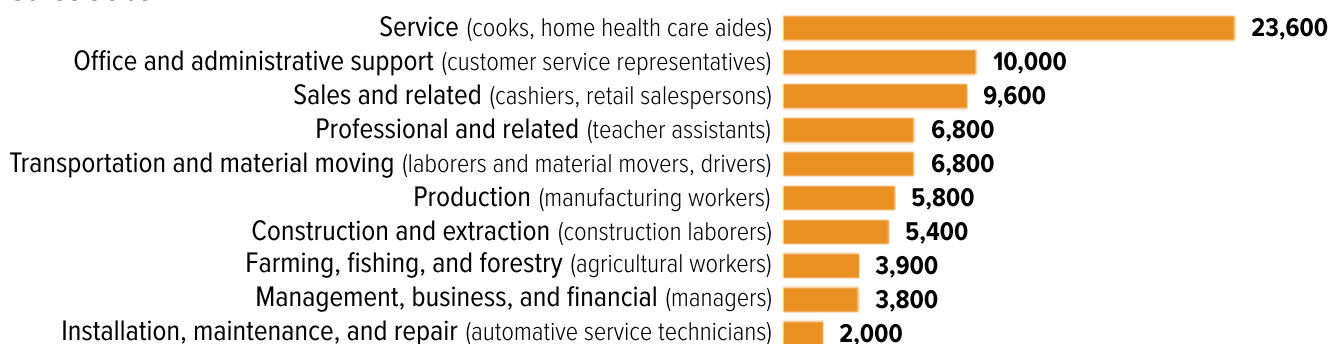

The Food Stamp Program Helps Workers:

- ✓ Who earn low wages.
The Food Stamp Program boosts low wages to help workers afford adequate food.
- ✓ Who have unpredictable schedules.
Food Stamp Program benefits help smooth out variable income for workers whose paychecks rise and fall as their hours change.
- ✓ Who are between jobs.
The Food Stamp Program helps workers without paid sick leave or other benefits, which can cause them to lose income or employment when they have a family crisis.

Idahoans Participating in the Food Stamp Program Most Commonly Work in Service, Office, and Sales Jobs

In Idaho, workers who participate in the Food Stamp Program most commonly work in service occupations, such as cooks or home health care aides, office and administrative support occupations, such as customer service representatives, and sales and related occupations, such as cashiers or retail salespersons.

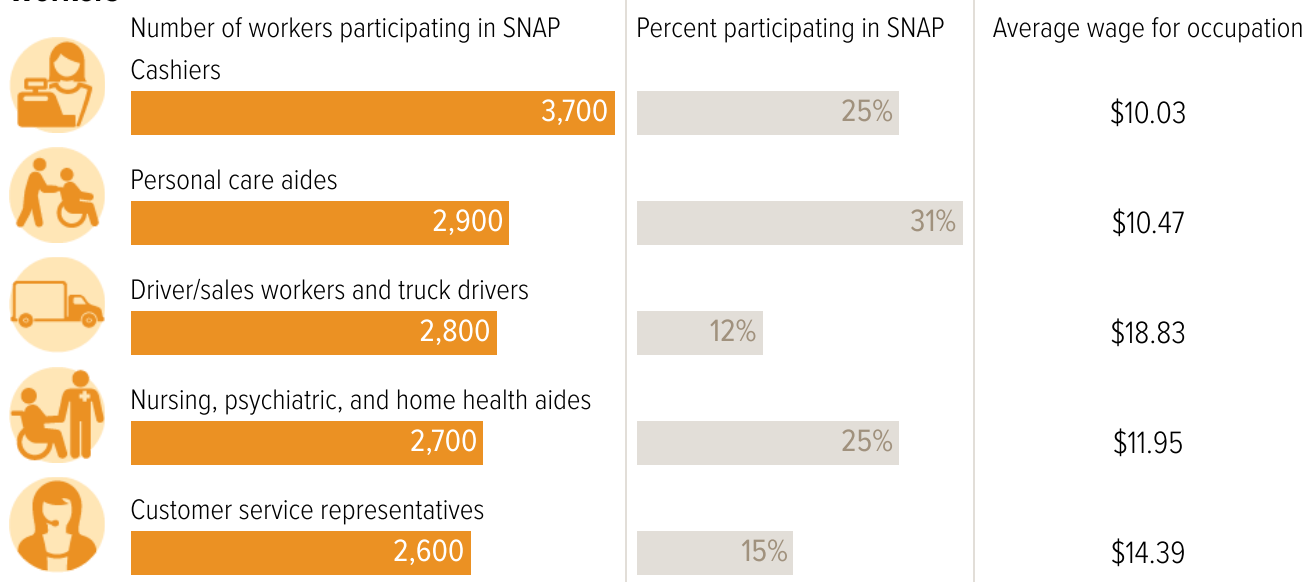

Idahoans Participating in the Food Stamp Program Most Commonly Work in Service, Office, and Sales Jobs

Working Idahoans Participating in the Food Stamp Program Typically Have Jobs With Low Wages

For example, the top five occupations among Idahoans participating in the Food Stamp Program have average hourly wages far below the state average of $20.15 in 2016.

Top Occupations Among Idahoans Participating in the Food Stamp Program by Number of Workers

In Some Occupations, a Large Share of Workers Participate in the Food Stamp Program

Workers in many of these jobs often earn low wages or work fewer or less consistent hours than they would like, so the Food Stamp Program provides essential support. Close to one-third of personal care aides, one-quarter of cashiers, and nursing assistants and other health aides, over one-fifth of cooks, and one-fifth of maids and housekeeping cleaners participate in the Food Stamp Program.

Top Occupations in Idaho by Percentage of Workers Participating in the Food Stamp Program

For more state data and source information, see “SNAP Helps Low-Wage Workers in Every State,” <https://www.cbpp.org/blog/interactive-map-snap-helps-low-wage-workers-in-every-state>.